In the animal world, some animals can help each other. Here is one example-Clownfish and sea anemone. Clownfish are orange with white stripes. They are small. Some are only six centimeters long. Anemones look like flowers. They are animals, not plants. They live in the sea. They make their homes on coral reefs. They have beautiful colors: pink, green, red, purple and blue.

Anemones look very nice, but they are not really nice. They can hurt people. But clownfish can be safe from them because the anemone's tentacles do not hurt them. Clownfish and anemones are a good example of mutualism. The anemone gives the clown fish a happy and safe home for clownfish. The clownfish brings the anemone food and sea anemones keep bad guys away from clownfish. Thanks to the clownfish, the anemone is full and healthy.
